A Sneak Peak into the Athens Museum

The Athens Museum is located on the main floor of the Lions Club building at 12 Wellington St. East Athens, Ontario

Schools of Athens

School photos., lettered jacket, football, and skates all provide many memories for students of the Athens High School and one room schoolhouses that once dotted the landscape in our Township.

Harmonious and Jerusha
Alguire

Paintings of early settler Harmonious Alguire and his wife Jerusha Alguire in the late 1800s. Harmonious was the builder behind what is now known as the 'white house' on Elgin. They watch over the Museum with a careful eye.

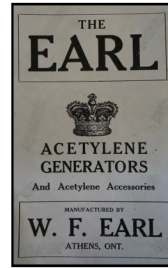

Athens Telephone

A switchboard and phones may stir up memories. Did you know that Athens had a telephone office? Some residents have worked on a switchboard like the one on display at the Athens Museum.

Some visitors have said that they grew up with shared / party lines and they can remember listening to the conversations of others to get the latest news!

Foss Earl Inventor and Tin Smith

Foss Earl, known to his family as 'Fossee' owned and operated a tin shop on Main Street. He received a patent in 1905 for the acetylene generator. His gas lighting systems were installed through out the village until 1928. Come to the Museum to find out what happened in 1928.

Elizabeth 'Mother' Barnes

Tales and fortunes were told at the table of Mother Barnes. Canadian Prime Minister Sir John A McDonald was said to be a frequent visitor She was well known in the area and is still talked about over a hundred years after she passed away.

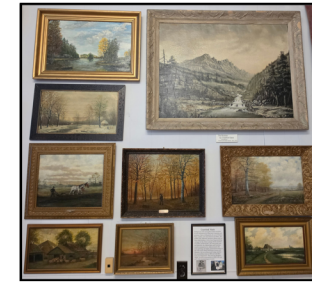

Aunt
Sarah's
Bonnet

Various Doctors and Nurses have cared for patients over the years in Athens. Of note, is Sarah Wiltse, known as 'Aunt Sarah' to many. She tended the sick at the hospital at what is now a private residence on Sarah Street South.

Paintings by Crawford Slack

Circa 1920's

Athens artist Crawford Slack was a prolific painter, poet and a musician. The Athens Museum is proud to host several of his art works including a backdrop used for various stage performances in the 1920s.

Athens Fire Department

The display for the Athens Fire Department is new and a work in progress. On the left, a Fire Chief's uniform and on the right, a dress uniform for a Fire Prevention Officer. The sign features the 1936 Bickle fire truck that is driven in parades including the annual Athens nighttime Christmas Parade.

Book of
Ferns

The Book of New Zealand Ferns was given to Lydia Brown Leavitt in 1877. The book was at the Athens Public Library for many years before making its way to the Athens Museum.
